UD ART SERIES PRESENTS DANCER RAYMOND JOHNSON

DAYTON, Ohio, March 25, 1976 --- A hypnotic ambiguity and a stream of black experience images is a preview of what Raymond Johnson will offer his audience. The University of Dayton Art Series will present this dancer and choreographer at 8:15 PM on April 6, 8, and 9, in the Kennedy Union Ball Theatre.

A native of New York, Johnson is working with his own dance company based in Woodstock. He began his career with Murray Louis and Alwin Nikolais, first as a study then performed and toured with both their companies from 1963-1971. He continued his career in dance with teaching, directing, or various other dance related forms of entertainment.

Raymond Johnson has received critical acclaim as a strong, mysterious, and talented dancer. The New York Times says, "Mr. Johnson has a sense of humor tinged with the tragic." The Village Voice review claims "Johnson shows a series of moods and attitudes from coquettish to defiant...All his ideas are blended into one seamless dance."
